To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing to express my opinion that irradiated food should be labeled as such. I personally would like a label saying which pesticides have been used on the food I eat, but that doesn't seem feasible. I think an informational statement should be on the package informing consumers that the food has been treated with irradiation. The radura symbol on the food packages is a good idea as well, and possibly in the future the informational message can be taken away and only the logo will be on the food package.

Sincerely,

Joshua Forman
